Restrictions Mark Attempt of Minority to Impose Will on All, Senator Charges

Special Dispatch to The Tribune

CLEVELAND, Dec. 16.—State Senator James J. Walker, who will be democratic majority leader in the next session of the Ohio State Senate, told the Cleveland Club here to-day that he would do his best to repeal the New York Lusk laws and the motion picture censorship law of that state.

"The laws are an attempt to force the industry of reformers to forget the rights of the people," Mr. Walker said. "I shall have no objection to the subject of motion picture censorship, but I object to the censorship of the press. I object to the censorship of the press, and I object to the censorship of the press."

"I would treat all alike," Mr. Walker said. "I would treat all alike, and I would treat all alike. I would treat all alike, and I would treat all alike. I would treat all alike, and I would treat all alike."

Smokes in Bed 60 Years and Shoots When Pal Objects

Friend Provides Cheerier Holiday Quarters for Aged Man; Charged With Violence, Can't Be Found

Michael O'Neill, who is eighty years old and has been smoking a pipe in bed every night for about sixty years before yielding to slumber, smoked in a new bed last night. If the police had known where it was they would have interrupted his smoke and spoiled his night's rest.

Michael is accused by his only pal, Richard Weston, who is only sixty years old, of shooting him in the cheek because of his objection to Michael's habit of smoking in the bed he shared with Weston.

Until about a month ago Michael was an inmate of a home for the aged. He was related to Weston's wife, who died a few years ago, and on meeting Weston bemoaned the dreary prospect of spending Christmas in the home. Weston's sympathy was aroused. He invited the old man to share his three rooms on the third floor of 102 Maiden Lane. Michael accepted. The first day in the new quarters was a happy one. Weston was glad of the companionship of Michael and Michael was glad to be out of the home.

That night Michael smoked up as usual when he retired. "Hey," said Weston, "you can't smoke in bed." "I've been smokin' in bed for sixty years," replied Michael. "They even let me do it at the home."

He smoked. Every evening he smoked. Every evening Weston expostulated and every evening Michael replied in much the same words. Every evening, however, the words were uttered with a little more vigor.

Friday evening the incident occurred as usual. Yesterday morning Michael was up early and dressed and leaving his apartment before Weston had awakened. About 9 a. m. he returned. He entered without a word, Weston said, thrust a revolver in his face and pulled the trigger. The bullet ploughed through Weston's face, his pipe into his mouth and strode out. Weston was taken to Reekman Street Hospital.

Jail Delivery Plot in Brunen Trial Is Foiled

Detective Leans Against Cell Door and Finds a Bolt Filed Through; Two Said to Have Confessed

Woman Is Implicated

Gave Tool to Man Next to Mohr on Tier, It Is Declared; Men Shackled

Special Dispatch to The Tribune

MOUNT HOLLY, N. J., Dec. 16.—A wholesale jail delivery plot engineered by friends of Harry C. Mohr, on trial here for the murder of "Honest John" Brunen, was averted at the last minute recently by the action of Detective Clifford Cain, it became known to-night. Cain's discovery of a filed bolt on the door of the cell adjoining that occupied by Mohr led to the frustration of the plot.

The scheme, according to statements made by officials, involved besides Mohr, Frank Patrillo, Grover Landis, Ernest May and John Williams, all prisoners in the county jail in adjoining cells on the second floor. After Cain had discovered the plot, two of the men involved made a confession, it was said.

Woman Visitor Implicated

The confession implicates a woman, who was a visitor to Mohr, and a man who was a friend of one of the prisoners. The woman, it is alleged, passed a file to Mohr, who was in the next cell to Mohr. May was chosen as the principal figure and the man to handle the file because Mohr was searched every night before he was allowed to retire. May filed through the bolt which fastened his cell door. Detective Cain, who went to the jail to question Mohr in connection with the Brunen killing, learned against the door of May's cell while he was talking. The door yielded before the pressure of his shoulders, and, realizing that something was wrong, Cain held up something at the point of a revolver and called the guards. May was removed to a cell on another tier.

The plan, according to the confession, was to release May through the agency of the filed bolt. May, in turn, was to knock out Joseph Collins, the superintendent, as he passed on his final round of inspection, and take his keys and revolver. The other prisoners were to be freed through unlocked doors, when they were to take their chances on making their way out of the jail. The man and the woman involved were to be waiting at the jail door with an automobile in which the party hoped to make a clean getaway.

Since the discovery of this plot supervision of the prisoners has been rigid, and the men involved in the attempt to escape have been shackled together.

May was held at Mount Holly for the murder of John J. Fox, and was later sentenced to a life term. Duncan was convicted of killing Sergeant Michael Gregory at Camp Dix, and was afterward given fourteen to twenty years for the crime. Patrillo and Williams were charged with being concerned in a hold-up.

Walter H. Keown, attorney for Mrs. Doris Brunen, said to-day he was confident he would be able to obtain the acquittal of Mrs. Brunen. No evidence has been brought forward, Keown said, which even remotely would connect the accused wife with the crime. He added that he believed the evidence he would submit when the trial resumes on Monday largely will offset the testimony on behalf of the prosecution tending to implicate Mohr.

Keown said he would move on Monday for Mrs. Brunen's acquittal. Failing this, he said, he probably would testify on her behalf. He indicated also that Mohr would be permitted to tell his story as one of the witnesses for the defense. The case is expected to reach the jury before the end of next week.

Mrs. Brunen slept last night in the Mount Holly jail, officials said to-day. Mohr, however, was up late studying the notes of the testimony given at Friday's hearing. Charles M. Powell, whose confession resulted in Mohr's arrest and the charge of murder against him and Mrs. Brunen, was visited on Friday night at the jail by his wife, who took with her her infant. To-day the jurors visited the Brunen home at Riverside, in company with two deputy sheriffs. Their object was to familiarize themselves with the scene of the shooting.

Whitney Seeks to Annul Divorce of Dancer Suing Him

Counsel Tells Justice That Miss Fontaine Perjured Self to Get Decree from Sterling Adair, Now Dead

Counsel for Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, son of Harry Payne Whitney, applied yesterday to Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Tompkins, at Nyack, for an order to vacate the decree granted to Evan Burrows Fontaine, the Oriental dancer, annulling her marriage to Sterling A. Adair, a native of Texas, who is now dead, on the grounds that the dancer had committed fraud and perjury to obtain it.

In support of the charges several letters which are said to have been written by Miss Fontaine to Adair following their marriage on April 17, 1918, were filed with the court in an effort to prove that they had lived together as man and wife, and to prove false statements to the contrary made by Miss Fontaine at the time of the annulment proceedings. It was Justice Tompkins himself who granted the annulment two years ago, and at that time Miss Fontaine testified that she had remained with Adair only three hours after the wedding ceremony, parting with him then, and that she had never lived with him as his wife.

The letters submitted to the court yesterday were in photographic form and George H. Taylor Jr., associated with Charles Firestone, counsel for Miss Fontaine, declared he believed the dates on the letters had been changed and asked permission of the court to examine the originals. This was granted and the court gave instructions that he be allowed to see them the first part of the week, but his application for an additional week to produce more affidavits was denied, since Justice Tompkins said he had had plenty of time already.

Justice Tompkins reserved decision on the order to vacate the annulment, but it is thought that he will be ready to decide the question some time this week, since the hearing on the motion calling on the counsel for Miss Fontaine was held.

$9,211 Dry Fines Imposed

In Federal Court, Newark, yesterday all records were broken for the number of liquor offenders sentenced and for the amount of fines collected in one day. Judge Joseph L. Bodine heard all cases and speeded up the machinery to the highest possible velocity.

Judge Bodine sentenced two offenders to jail for one week each and imposed fines on forty-six others ranging from $1 to $500. In all $9,211 in fines was assessed. The largest number of fines were for $250 each.

John J. Ferry, twenty years old, convicted of impersonating a prohibition agent and of extorting money from a saloonkeeper, was sentenced to two years, but his counsel, John J. Matthews, called attention to the offender's youth and offered to be a "big brother" to him. On this plea the court postponed sentence "to give the boy a chance."

Old Soak Parrot Cries "Set 'Em Up," But Gets Only Tea

Ancient Polly, With Honorable Bar Room Record of Years, Droops in Parlor Spirits Low, Heart Sore

All that is left of a once noble bird reposes in the parlor of the home of Fred W. Henn, a lawyer of 182 Ege Avenue, Jersey City. The bird is a parrot—a bird that in the old days exchanged jests and banter with boot-black, bankers, truck driver and politician; a bird who every now and then would cock his head to the side after viewing the industrious efforts of a bartender and then scream out: "Who ever heard of putting Jamaica rum in milk punch?"

It was this same parrot that revealed in the varied odors from many bottles put on the bar. It knew the scent of rum from the aroma of gin. It was a discriminating bird, too, accepting only certain bits from the free lunch counters. And for nearly seventy years those who would say they could "take it or leave it alone" sang the bird's praises. For three generations the bird had known only the life of the barroom, first one, then another and finally a third.

To-day the parrot sits with head bowed. Its eyes have lost their lustre. From time to time it sniffs the air, but the old familiar odors are gone. "Set 'em up again," croaks the bird. But nothing is set up. There is no clatter of glasses on the bar and no more is the sound of bottles sliding across the mahogany.

Mr. Henn obtained the parrot from his mother and she got it from her father, who ran a cafe for more than fifty years in Jersey City. Before that and since it has been in the possession of two other cafe proprietors.

Polly is now drinking coffee for breakfast and dinner and tea for supper, but it makes awful faces, like some old fellow with a red nose sipping at a chocolate malted milk.
